1925 PREFACE

THE present is the fifth edition of Who's Who in the Theatre, and perhaps I may be pardoned if I dwell with some satisfaction on the fact that no other work dealing with theatrical biography has ever succeeded as this work has succeeded.

During the nineteenth century there must have been thirty or more works devoted to dramatic biography, and none of these publications reached a third issue. The best was undoubtedly Charles Pascoe's Dramatic List, published in 1879 and again in 1880. During the nineties of the last century, there were not a few such ephemeral publications. Half-a-dozen works made their appearance and vanished.

Players of the Day was issued in 1902, and then, in 1906, came The Green Room Book, which I was able to pilot to a fourth issue, when, owing to the death of my publisher, the series came to an end.

In 1912 Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., undertook for me the publication of Who's Who in the Theatre. Everywhere since that date the work has been received with the greatest appreciation. It is as popular in the United States, Australia and South Africa as it is in England.

The present edition contains between 2,000 and 3,000 biographies, over 350 of which appear for the first time. I should like to take this opportunity of again drawing attention to the extraordinary difficulty which I experience in persuading a great many members of the Profession to give anything like accurate details of their early theatrical careers. Players of both sexes seem to have an inordinate dislike of revealing facts and dates, and quite a number appear to have no compunction in striking years off the date of a production in which they have appeared, ignoring the fact that I am able to trace these incorrect statements quite easily, from my files. Others, quite calmly, inform me that I must have mixed them up with someone else of the same name, but somehow these other persons always seem to disappear.

A good actor or actress is like a good vintage of wine. The public adores it, but likes to know the year of the vintage all the same. The difference is that usually the player puts the date forward, the vintner does not.

Since the last issue of Who's Who in the Theatre, death has once more taken a full toll, and over 100 biographies disappear from the book. It is melancholy to reflect that among those who are now only memories, and will never delight us more, are Meggie Albanesi, Rutland Barrington, Kate Bishop, Louis Calvert, Malcolm Cherry, Albert Chevalier, Charles Collette, Kenneth Douglas, Winifred Emery, H. V. Esmond, Charles Glenney, Lucien Guitry, Sir Charles Hawtrey, Agnes Hewitt, Alfred Lester, Letty Lind, Marie Lloyd, Robert Pateman, Mrs. Raleigh, Lilian Russell, Kate Santley, Herbert Standing, Kate Terry, Geneviève Ward, Arthur Whitby, Charles Workman, Cowley Wright, and many more.

Among others whose loss we have to lament, authors, composers, managers and critics, are Austin Brereton, John Crook, A. E. Drinkwater, Herbert E. Haines, Cyril Harcourt, Victor Herbert, H. G. Hibbert, Louis A. Hirsch, Aaron Hoffman, Walter Howard, Gustave A. Kerker, Lionel Monckton, J. B. Mulholland, George R. Sims, and Herbert Trench.

In the present issue I have included a synopsis of play-bills of the principal productions and revivals in London, from the beginning of 1922 to 15th July, 1925, which I hope will prove useful. The biographies are corrected to the end of December, 1924, the synopsis of playbills brings the record up to date.

Once again I would call attention to the genealogical tables dealing with theatrical heredity, compiled by Dr. J. M. Bulloch, the esteemed critic of the Graphic. These now number over ninety and are well worthy of study. They have involved research through records from the early eighteenth century, and form a remarkable index to hereditary talent in the theatre. My sincere thanks are due to Dr. Bulloch for his ever ready help in this work.

Again I have to acknowledge my thanks to Mrs. Gabrielle Enthoven, who has supplied me with many notes of early appearances, from her vast collection of play-bills; and to my daughter, Mrs. George Carpenter, Mr. J. R. Platt and Mrs. Stanley Penny, who have helped in the reading of certain proofs.

No one who has not engaged in a similar undertaking can appreciate the immense amount of work involved in the compilation of a volume of this description, for, with the exception of the genealogical tables, it has been a single-handed task. However, I trust the result will prove of some value to those who are interested in the world of the Theatre and its people.

JOHN PARKER.
